MORELIA

World Cultural Heritage

since 1991

MORELIA was ruled by the Spanish from 1545 to 1828 and was previously known as Valladolid before it changed its name in honour of one of Mexico's Independence Heroes José María Morelos y Pavón who was born in this city.

Historic Buildings

Today MORELIA is one of 14 Cultural Heritage Cities of Mexico and considered one of the best preserved for it's baroque architecture and layout. It was once considered an important governing and religious capital in times when Mexico was named the New Spain, bringing all major catholic orders to establish and build more than 30 monasteries and convents with temples, most still standing today.

Morelia's distinctive pink Cathedral from the 17th century took more than 80 years to build and sits in the heart of the city; it is surrounded by plazas and located on the main avenue making it the ideal starting point to visit historical monuments, exconvents, temples, museums and more by foot. The Cathedral houses the 2nd largest Flute Organ in Mexico and every year hosts the International Organ Festival of Morelia.

Experiences

Food Experience

Thanks to Michoacan's geographical location and rich food culture, Morelia being the capital of the state is surrounded by fertile lands that produces the country's best avocados, corn, berries, guavas, dairy and agricultural products making the city a prime Food Destination.

Must Try!

Gaspacho

Morelia's favourite fruit snack: diced pineapple, jicama, cucumber and mango with a squeeze of lime and orange juice topped with dry cheese and chili; you can also personalize your own with other fruits.

Carnitas

Slow-simmered braised pork, using all the parts of the pig, it is cooked in a copper pot and enjoyed in a taco or torta accompanied by jalapeños and chopped tomatoes and onion.

Uchepos

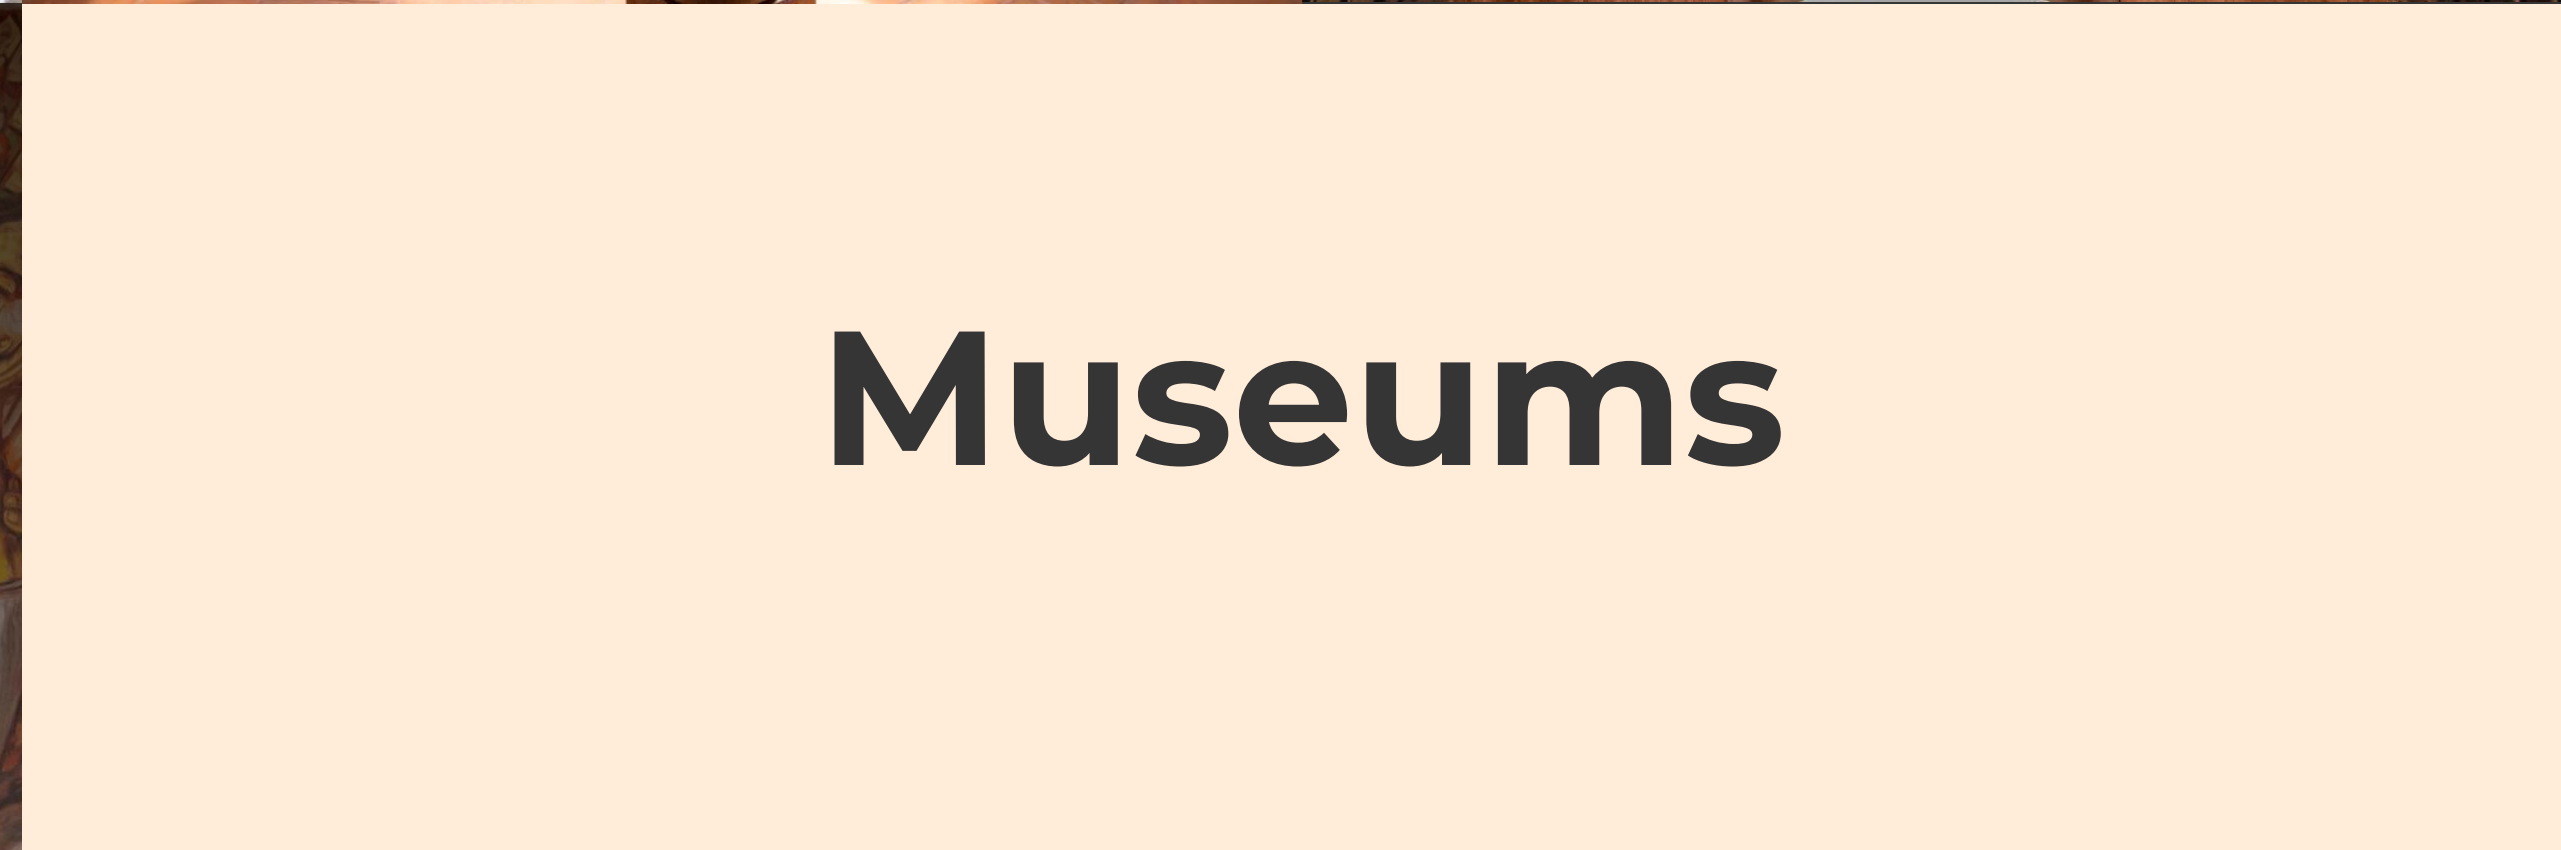

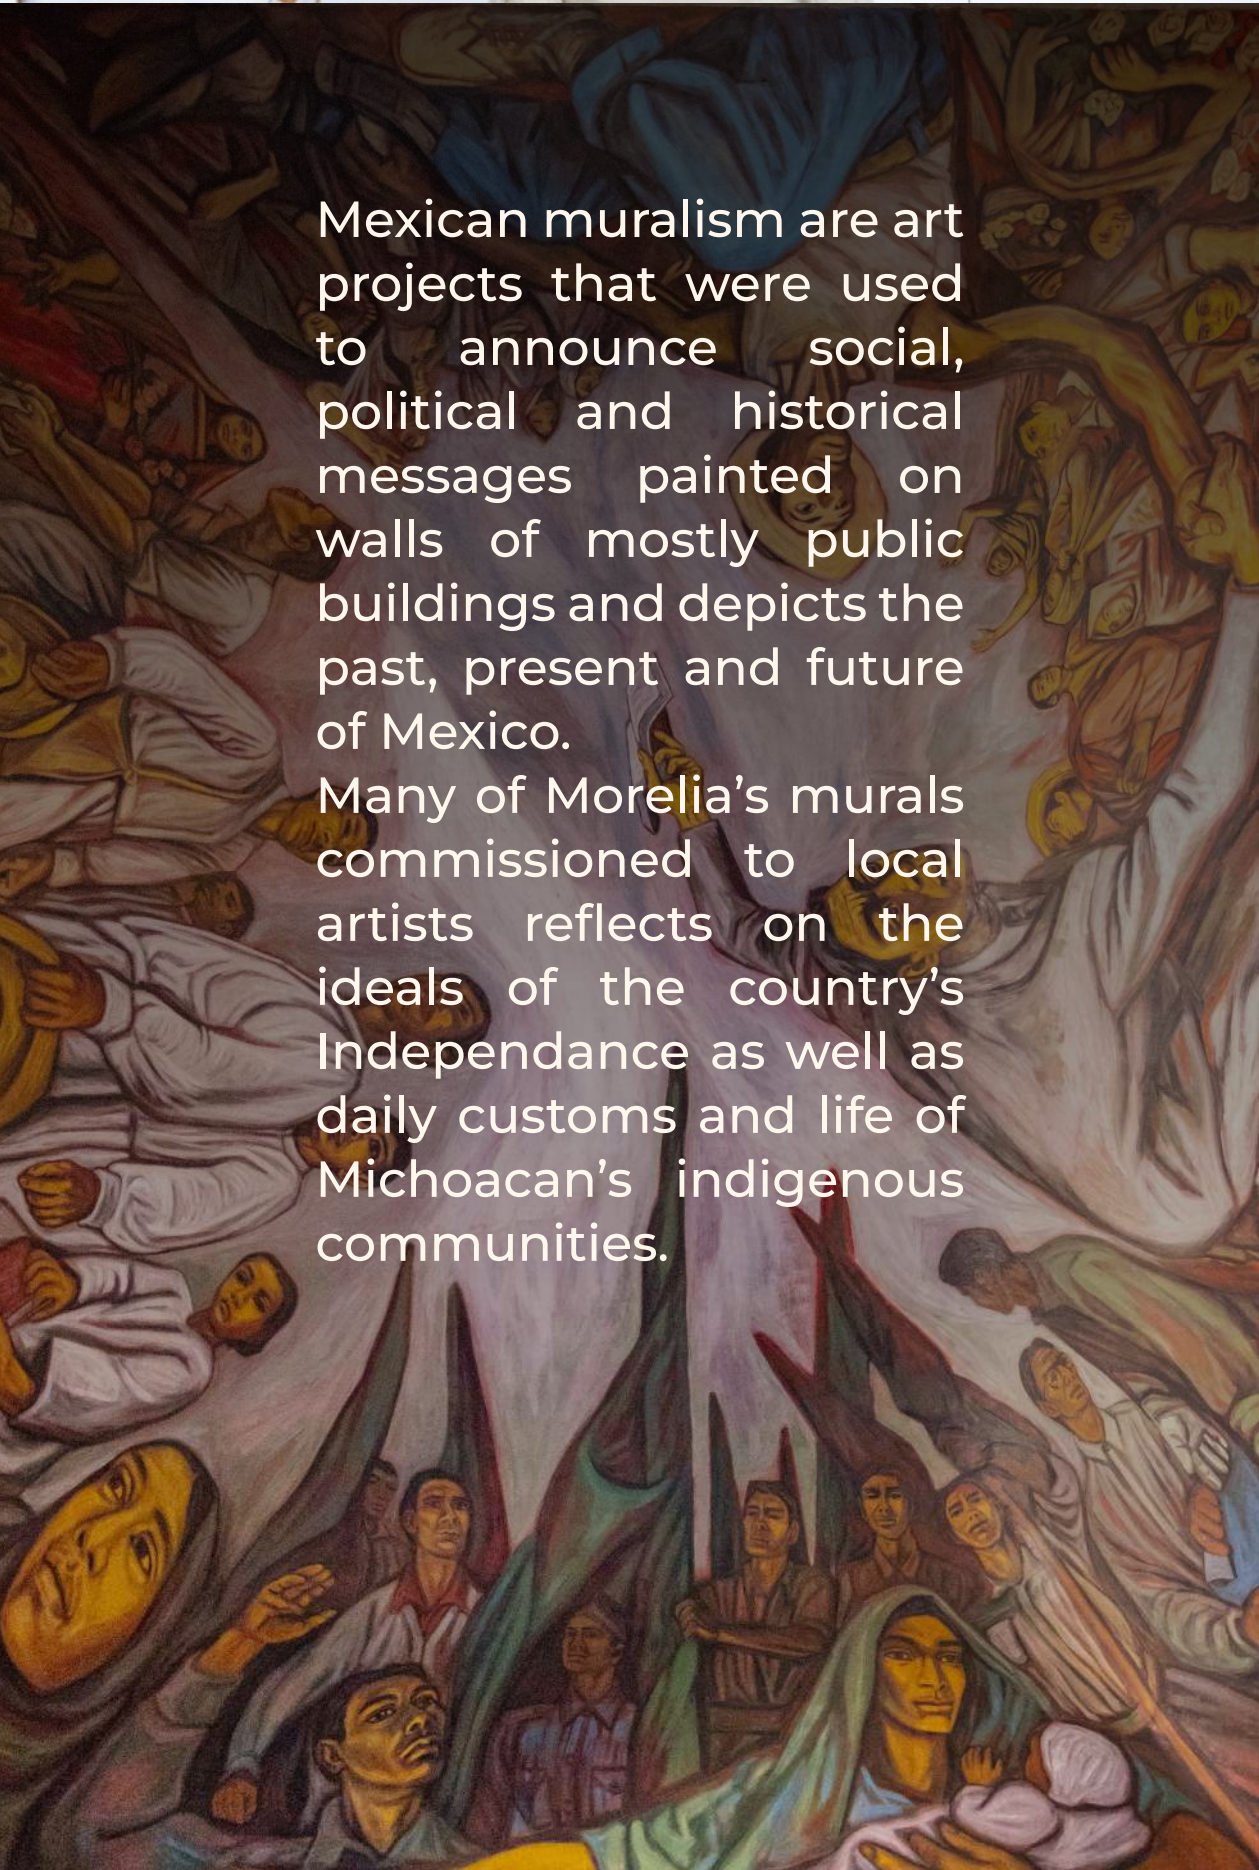

Made with ground young corn, then steamed wrapped in corn husks, this prehispanic recipe can be found in local markets from the early morning.

Mezcal

This distilled spirit from the agave plant is found all over Mexico and also produced in the neighboring villages of Morelia.

Museums

Mexican muralism are art projects that were used to announce social, political and historical messages painted on walls of mostly public buildings and depicts the past, present and future of Mexico. Many of Morelia's murals commissioned to local artists reflects on the ideals of the country's Independence as well as daily customs and life of Michoacan's indigenous communities.
